Why Have the List Prices of Adipic Acid been Raised so Frequently?

2017-09-11

As can be seen in the picture below, China exported 270,000 tons of adipic acid in 2016, among which those exported to America amounted to around 5,400 tons, which is very limited. PUdaily asked some domestic adipic acid exporters whether the U.S. clients have placed more orders or increased inquiries recently. The answer is that the shutdown of facilities in the U.S. has little impact on domestic export orders. However, from the customs data in recent months, it can be seen that the monthly volume of adipic acid exports has stayed above 30,000 tons since April. The export volume has maintained a rapid pace of growth, which to some extent supports the rise of domestic adipic acid prices...More
